Platform : IMC Library Lounge, Resham Bhavan 3rd Floor IMC, Churchgate, 400 020

Agriculture is both a source of carbon and a sync for carbon. Emissions from the agriculture sector can be captured and sequestered. There is growing market for carbon credit particularly in industrialised economies. Those in agriculture especially growers can benefit from this market for Carbon credit.

It is possible to reduce emissions in the agriculture sector. We need to follow the principal of circularity in reducing emissions. Regenerative agriculture also create opportunities for increasing land use intensity and for scientifically managing scares water resources.

Climate change is a threat to Indian Agriculture. Therefore we need to practise Climate Smart Agriculture. This will involve use of multiple technologies.

Dr. Usha Zehr, Executive Director, Grow Indigo Pvt Ltd will be delivering the Special Address on Regenerative Agriculture and Carbon Credit followed by the Networking session.

Given the importance of this subject trade and Industry association in the agri business space will benefit by participating in this event. There will be take home messages for the agriculture and agri business sectors covering growers, FPO's, trading house, Processors and many more.
