As an important cash crop for India, cotton is known as White Gold. India ranks high among the world's largest producers, consumers and exporters of the natural fiber. The textiles and clothing industry is a dominant end-user of cotton yarn. This natural fiber has specialised application in 'technical textiles' too. It is a crop that provides both fiber and food.

The world cotton market often faces volatile conditions as it is buffeted by diverse factors. Therefore, all the participants in the cotton value chain - primary producers, processors, industrial users, exporters, and traders - face price risk. Market driven tools like commodity derivatives have been instrumental in assisting industry in managing price risk. It is in this context, we are hosting a Seminar which will highlight the following

- Changing dynamics of the Cotton industry
- Current Situation, challenges faced by the sector and possible solutions
- Likely future developments in the global and Indian cotton sector
- Strategies to mitigate price risk and protect built- in- margins
- Managing forward sales using Cotton futures contract

Special address will be delivered by Mr. Suresh Kotak, Chairman, Kotak Co Pvt Ltd.

The key speakers are:

- Mr. G Chandrashekhar, Economic Advisor, IMC and Director IMC-ERTF
- Mr. Manish Daga, MD, Cotton Guru
- Mr. Badruddin Khan, AVP, PMTAgri, MCX
